This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

GENERAL INDEX OF THE JOURNALS OF CONGRESS.

Mr. STEPHENS, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following

REPORT:

The Committee on Rules, who were instructed, by resolutions passed June 18, 1878, to provide for the preparation of a general index of the journals of Congress, respectfully report:

That the index of the journals of the first ten Congresses, embracing the period from March 4, 1789, to March 4, 1809, has been completed, and they ask that it be printed, under the supervision of the indexer, for the use and information of the House and the public, and be recommitted to the Committee on Rules.

PREFACE.

"Show me a practical improvement and that improvement I will do my best to realize."

This preliminary publication, comprising the index of the journals of the first ten Congresses, is made for the purpose of submitting to criticism and revision the plan, forms, and method designed for the entire work. I shall welcome suggestions, and even the most unsparing criticism; for the work I have undertaken, being almost entirely original in its design, is still subject to great improvement in its details.

To use this index profitably, or to criticise it intelligently, it is necessary that its purposes and scope should be fully understood.

The accumulated records of Congress are contained in about two thousand volumes of laws, documents, journals, and debates. These volumes contain the history of legislation since the organization of the government, and, therefore, information essential to guide legislation in the future. Each volume being separately indexed, on the most diverse and imperfect plans, it has become almost impossible to extract from them the full history of any subject on which information is sought.

What is obviously desirable is either separate general indexes of the laws, the documents, the debates, and the journals, or one comprehensive general index of the whole. It would require a very long time and the expenditure of a very large amount of money to accomplish either of these plans. As an alternative, I have conceived that a general index of the journals can be prepared in such form as to present a synopsis of the history of legislation on every subject, and make accessible information contained in the other publications of Congress.

The plan that I have adopted to fulfill this purpose is based on the fact that the journals contain a brief record of everything done in Congress, and the plan is carried out by referring the enquirer to the debates, documents, and laws in which he can obtain the more detailed information that is not recorded in the journals.

Simple as this plan appears it presents numerous problems in its execution, on the solution of which depends the success of the plan and the value of the index produced. As a knowledge of these problems, and the manner in which I have dealt with them, is essential to an intelligent use of the index, I will detail the most important of them.

One of the most difficult problems I have had to deal with arises from the fact that bills frequently contain matters entirely foreign to their subject-title. It is manifestly proper, and in many cases very important, to make an index-entry of such matter; for a matter at one time included in a general bill may at another time be the subject of a separate bill, and if the action in the former case was not entered in the index, the enquirer would fail to get a true statement of the history of legislation on the subject. The difficulty is to draw the line determining how far we should go in this direction. The analysis of an act, and entry under proper titles of all its details, belongs properly to a synoptical index of the laws, and venturing to introduce any such entries in a general index of the journals must at times lead to disappointment in not finding others that might be expected. Nevertheless, I have felt the object to be of such importance that I have endeavored to frame a general rule to meet it.

This rule is, that when any bill, report, or document contains important matter that is entirely foreign to the subject-title given to such bill, report, or document, an index-entry of the matter is made under its proper subject-title; but that however important or extensive a matter is, if it relates directly to the general subject-title of the bill, report, or document, the only entry in the general index is under that general subject-title. To make my meaning clearer, I will illustrate the application of the rule.

An act of June 18, 1878, "making appropriations for the support of the Army," contains a clause appointing a committee on the subject of transferring the Indian Bureau to the War Department, and a clause prohibiting the use of the Army as a posse comitatus. As these matters are entirely foreign to the subject-title of the act, they would, under the rule I propose, be entitled to entry in the index under their respective subjects.

An act of July 31, 1879, "to regulate the collection of duties," divides the country into collection-districts, establishes ports of entry, establishes the offices, and prescribes the duties of customs-officers, provides regulations for entering goods and unloading vessels, fixes fees and penalties, and a multitude of other matters, which, in an index of the laws, would require innumerable entries; but, under the rule I propose, none of these matters would receive separate entry in the general index of the journals, for the reason that they all relate directly to the general subject-title of the act.

Even with this attempt at a general rule, many questions arise under it which it is difficult to decide, and the decision on which will always subject the indexer to criticism.

It will be perceived, therefore, that there are certain limitations upon the direct information which can be derived from a general index of the journals. In other words, a general index of the journals alone can no more give absolutely everything contained in the congressional records on a given subject than the catalogue of a library can refer to everything contained in the library on a given subject in all the encyclopedias, periodicals, and books in the library in which the subject may be incidentally treated. In both cases the intelligence of the enquirer, aided by all the possible suggestions and references of the cataloguer, should indicate to him where to look for further information than is directly given. Nevertheless, I conceive that I have, by the plan of this index and by some variations from the ordinary rules of indexing, so far enlarged its scope that it will very nearly fulfill all demands made upon it.

After solving the question of treatment of bills containing extraneous matter, we find another class of bills of which the subject-title gives but little, if any, indication of the nature of the bill. For example, the act of August 10, 1790, "making further provision for the payment of the debt of the United States," is in reality a "tariff bill," prescribing the duties on imports. In such cases there is, I conceive, only one safe rule, which is to index the bill under the subject to which it really relates. Under this rule, the act which I have cited would have its full index-entry under "Import Duties."

Another difficulty arises from erroneous or synonymous titles given bills and documents. The journals of Congress being the record of a multitude of men and a multitude of minds, they are naturally filled with cases of synonymous or equivalent terms used for the same matter by different persons. If we followed this multiform and accidental phraseology of titles, we would separate matters which are identical or analogous. I therefore bring all matters relating to the same subject under one title, without regard to the errors or accidents of the titles given them in the journal.

In another class of cases, the subject-title may be correct without containing any distinctive or suggestive word under which it might be indexed. As an illustration I quote the following: "An act for the creation of a court for the adjudication and disposition of certain moneys received into the Treasury under an award made by the tribunal of arbitration constituted by virtue of the first article of the treaty concluded at Washington the 8th day of May, A. D. 1871, between the United States of America and the Queen of Great Britain." In such cases as this it depends upon the genius of the indexer to fix upon some such title as usage or other consideration would suggest, and also to enter under such a variety of titles, with proper cross-references, as would make it impossible for the matter to escape discovery.

In many cases subject-titles are correct without conveying any idea of the nature or extent of the subject-matter. For example, the act of 1863 authorizing the issue of bonds, Treasury notes, fractional currency, etc., is entitled "An act to provide ways and means to support the government," and, as the extreme of absurdity, the only reference to it in the annual index is under the title "ways and means." In such cases as this the act itself must be analyzed, and reference made to it under as many different subject-titles in the index as there are distinct subject-matters treated of in the act.

From the cases I have mentioned, it will be apparent that each index-entry presents a problem, and as every such problem is capable of several different solutions, I am fully conscious that as different minds will view the matter from different standpoints, every entry may be criticised for not having been made otherwise. The general index, therefore, must bear the impress of the author's mind, and, like any other product of the human mind, be subject to the criticism of other minds, and prove a success or failure according to the ability employed in its production.

For the general form of the index I have adopted the dictionary system, though I have held myself so far untrammeled by its fixed rules as to approach the classified system in those cases in which I deem it advantageous. Any such departures from the fixed system are, however, qualified by a free use of cross-references.

As a rule I have arranged the matter under each subdivision of subject-titles in chronological order, so as to present a connected and synoptical history of the subject.

The index is confined to "public business." All memorials and petitions, all "private business," such as claims, pension bills, and bills for the relief of individuals, are omitted. These matters have no historical interest, have seldom any bearing on general legislation, and their bulk is enormous. An index of private claims, and the action taken on them from the First to the Forty-first Congress, has been published in four large volumes, which makes it still more unnecessary to include them in this index.

The custom introduced in the indexes of the session journals of indexing under the names of members is not followed in this general index, for the reason that however valuable such an index might be in itself, it would destroy the value of this index to include in it the bulk of matter necessary to duplicate its entries under the names of the not less than six thousand members of Congress since the organization of the government.

Routine and immaterial action on bills are omitted, but the designating number of each bill is given to enable reference to the "bill register" in the session journal, if it should be desired to learn such details.

To obviate the trouble of ascertaining the date of occurrences, I have prefixed the years in which the session of Congress referred to was held.

The system of numbering the entries under each subject-title I deem to be a valuable feature, not only for the great saving of space in making references, but also because it enables references to be made instantly instead of requiring search through a long series of entries to find the special one desired.

In making a critical examination of the index, it should be borne in mind that the arrangement of subject-titles, which may appear too elaborate for the amount of matter now included under them, has been made with a view to the much larger amount of matter that will come under them as the index progresses.

I earnestly ask all who have occasion to consult the records of Congress to submit this index to the test of practical use, and to those who have not time or inclination to make a critical examination of the plan of the work, I would suggest an examination of some one subject-title with which they may happen to be specially familiar. Only through the co-operation of all who are sufficiently interested to desire to see a work produced commensurate in value to the importance of its purposes can I hope to succeed, and I trust that I may have the benefit of their criticisms and suggestions to apply in the further prosecution of the work and embody in its final publication.

EXPLANATIONS.

The journals referred to prior to 14th Congress are the reprint edition of House Journal published in 1826 in nine volumes, and the reprint edition of Senate Journal published in 1821 in five volumes.

Senate bills prior to the 21st Congress are designated by the numbers given them in the "bill register" in the indexes of the House journals.

For further and detailed explanations, see preface.

Appropriations for (Annual)

Note.—Prior to 1794 the annual appropriations for all purposes were made in one general bill "for the support of the government". In 1794 the annual "Army Appropriation Bill" was first introduced, in which bill appropriations for the Navy were included until 1798. In 1798 appropriations for the Navy were made by separate bill, and in 1799 the annual "Navy Appropriation Bill" was first introduced.

Northwestern Territory

Note.—This is the territory comprised in the cession of Virginia. No specific name was given to it as a territory. In the act establishing a territorial government it is designated as the territory northwest of the river Ohio. It was subsequently divided into two parts and the name of Indiana Territory given to the western division, but no name was even then given to the eastern division, and it continued to be designated as the territory northwest of the river Ohio, and in the act authorizing the formation of the State of Ohio is designated as the eastern division of the territory northwest of the river Ohio. Though sometimes called "Ohio Territory," it appears to have been generally spoken of as "The Northwestern Territory," which name is therefore adopted for the purpose of indexing. The States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin were formed out of this territory.
